Friends:

Normally, around this time of year, we'd send you a newsletter letting you know about the work your lawmakers did on behalf of our community and the state during the recent legislative session.

However, these are not normal times, so this message is going to be quite different than what we've sent you in the past. If you want to learn more about the bills we approved this year, you can find that information on our websites at sdc.wastateleg.org and housedemocrats.wa.gov.

We wanted to send you this resource guide because more people than ever are going to be needing assistance to pay rent, buy groceries, and make ends meet.

Thousands of Washingtonians have been infected with the virus, and many have died as a result of complications from the coronavirus. Our hearts go out to their families and friends for their loss.

This is a rapidly evolving situation with new information coming out daily and sometimes hourly. Therefore, the best advice we can give is to urge you to please follow the most recent directions, guidance, and best practices given by Governor Inslee and state and local public health officials. They have done an amazing job and demonstrated true leadership throughout this crisis to help slow the spread of the disease and keep as many people safe and healthy as possible.

Continuing to practice strong social distancing – keeping at least six feet of distance between you and others – is the best way to slow the spread of the virus.

The coronavirus has touched all our lives and impacted the way we live, work, and interact with each other. None of us have seen anything like this before, so the future is a bit uncertain. There's no doubt this pandemic will put our state and our nation to the test.

As we've seen time and time again, we are confident our society will emerge from this challenge stronger and more united than ever.

We got this.

Sincerely,

Sen. Marko Liias

Rep. Lillian Ortiz-Self

Rep. Strom Peterson

What every Washingtonian can do right now to help stop the spread of coronavirus:

Practice good hygiene—Wash your hands often with warm, soapy water. Avoid touching your face, nose, eyes, and mouth. Clean and disinfect surfaces like doorknobs, tables and counters, and handrails.

Practice social distancing—Stay home, avoid crowds and non-essential travel. It's okay to get fresh air, walk your dogs, buy groceries and pick up medications, but maintain six feet of space between yourself and others when you do need to go out. Engage with friends and loved ones over the phone or video chat.

Take extra precaution for seniors, those with underlying conditions, and sick household members—Have people in the household conduct themselves as if they have the illness. If possible, provide a protected space or separate room with a closed door for vulnerable or sick household members.

If you have symptoms or were exposed—Call your doctor before going to a clinic or emergency room. The most common symptoms are fever, cough, and shortness of breath. These are also common symptoms for many other illnesses, so only your healthcare provider can determine if you need COVID-19 testing.

Show compassion and fight stigma—Viruses don't care where you live, the color of your skin, or the language you speak. We're all in this together, and we're stronger as a community when we stand up against discrimination and actively prevent, interrupt, and respond to stigma.

2020 Legislature's response to the coronavirus

Public health officials, the Legislature, the Governor's office and other local leaders have been working together to respond quickly to the coronavirus outbreak.

Before we adjourned for the year, the Legislature passed HB 2965 to dedicate $200 million from our state's "rainy day" fund to support state and local agencies in responding to the outbreak.

The bill also:

- Includes language to ensure people can receive unemployment insurance even if they can't meet the work search requirement due to quarantine or isolation, and mitigates costs to businesses due to increased numbers of workers receiving unemployment insurance;
- Gives flexibility to the State Board of Education to address graduation requirements for the class of 2020 on track to graduate prior to the emergency declaration; and

- Offers reimbursement to nursing homes that aid in the coronavirus response.

The Legislature also amended SB 6189 to ensure school employees can maintain health insurance eligibility for the remainder of the school year, even if they come up short of required work hours because of being quarantined, school closure, or care of a family member.

Why extreme measures are critical to saving lives

The near complete shutdown of our economy has been devastating. Unemployment claims shot through the roof virtually overnight and continue to rise as orders were issued by Governor Inslee to close all non-essential businesses.

People's lives have been turned upside down, including ours. But as hard as this is - and will continue to be for a while - on our economy, the extreme measures were absolutely necessary to save lives.

Public health experts at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) worked with researchers from around the world to develop projections for scenarios if we took no mitigation action to slow the spread of the virus.

What they found:

- 160 million to 214 million people in the U.S. could be infected over the next year or more.

- As many as 21 million people could require hospitalization
- As many as 1.7 million people could die.

In short, while this economic shutdown will be hard on all of us, the alternative would be much worse. Economies can be rebuilt. Lives cannot be brought back.
